CHURCHES OPEN DRIVE TO BACK FORCES OF LAW

Great Reform Movement Is Launched by 800 Protestant Groups in Chicago

MOBILIZING OPINION TO PUT DOWN CRIME

Plan Co-operation With Honest Officials-Will Apply Hoover Ideas to Problem

SPECIAL PROM MONITOR BUREAU CHICAGO - The 800 Protestant hurches identified with the Chicago Church Federation have embarked on the greatest moral movement, as they regard it, in the history of this city. It is almed at the crime which has tarnished Chicago's name. Its immediate object is to back up worthy law enforcing officials in Chicago and in Washington. President Hoover's declaration for bservance of law in his inaugural address gave the needed impetus.

"Our response is immediate," is the word the Chicago Church Federation sent back to him, "We have heard you, we believe in you, we are for you and we propose to apply you to Chicago in adopting a city-wide program for our churches." Building Public Opinion

The task the federation has set for itself is that of multiplying public sentiment for a better Chicago. Not in the last quarter of a century or more has such an effort been made by Chicago's Protestant churches, it is stated. The adopted slogan is "Civic Decency."
The leader is one of the most distinguished clergymen and educators of the country, Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean of the Divinity School at the University of Chicago. Dean Mathews is a former president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in Dixon, a prominent business man.

German Ambassador Speaks Optimistically—Soviet Receives Many Offers to Invest Funds

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR MOSCOW-The German Ambassador. Herbert von Dirksen, asserted in the course of a press interview during a visit to Leningrad that the German Government would by every means in its power support the initiative of the Soviet Government directed toward the quickest solution of the disarmament question. He characterized the recent signature of the Moscow protocol as an additional illustration of the peaceful efforts of the Soviet Union and declared that this step met with the unanimous approval of Germany.

He further stated, "The nationality policy of the Soviet Union enjoys no less popularity in Germany. The po-Supreme Councils, Scottish sition of the German-Soviet citizens both in the German Republic of the Volga and other places leaves noth-ing to be desired. The recently published decree about attracting for-eign capital and also the agreement signed in December between Ger-many and the Soviet Union will, it may be hoped, contribute to still greater activity and economic con-

The Soviet Union concessions committee has announced that it had received propositions for the investment of $100,000,000 in such Russian municipal enterprises as gas, electric stations, water works, tramway lines and so forth from foreign capitalists and firms. The greatest number of these proposals come from the United States and it was stated that there were cases when foreign banks agreed to finance the concessions. Since negotiations are still in a preliminary the names of the firms are withheld.

ADELAIDE, S. Aust.—From the whole of the northern districts of South Australia come reports of a serious water shortage, causing agri-cultural work to be held up in-definitely and stock to be sold at sacrificial prices. These conditions, so John G. Moseley, Liberal par-liamentarian, points out, recur periodically and he considers it a fitting time to contemplate a great water schemes in the north of South Australia, according to Mr. Moseley, have been most costly, and yet ineffective in providing per-manent supplies. On small works there has been a loss of nearly £200,000, and hydraulic experts have found in the northern mountain ranges. Years ago Western Australia was in precisely the same parlous condition as South Australia finds itself today. In that State there were millions of fertile, but waterless acres and several towns unconnected with a distant supply. The late Lord Forrest, a man of vision, undertook to make water available to some $300 miles. took to make water available to some 300 miles of agricultural lands and many towns and villages, Since then. Western Australia has never obtains only a portion of the produc-tion possible from lands that are partially watered. There are millions of acres from which not a tithe of the possible returns in wheat, meat and wool is got. Large sums have been spent on storage of water in the River Murray and at Lake Victoria in South Australia. This was a state of the storage of water and the storage of water in the Assistant Attorney Communication of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, South Australia. This was intended to provide for navigation, but Mr. Moseley (who was formerly the owner of 1,000,000 acres in the northvest of South Australia, and is a foremost authority on land affairs) asserts that trade is limited, while the problem of establishing a river port continues to be difficult. If South Australia is shortly going to have more water than the people can use, why allow it to remain unused? The distance from the Murray to the vicinity of the State's empty reservoirs is only about 60 miles.

South Australia has probably the greeatest reticulation scheme in the is no water. It is claimed that conveying water from the Murray would present no insuperable engineering difficulties, and probably none so great as those overcome in Western Australia. Mr. Moseley contends that the cost of pumping the water from the river would not be abnormal, and the permanent advantage would be measured in millions. He has no doubt, either, that the money required for the scheme would be available under the British offer of £30,000,000 for Australian enter-sign. As these under-cover agents have of prohibition enforcement, much criticism against the practice has been directed against her. Mrs. Willebrandt, both the department and Mr. Borah declare, had nothing to do with establishing the system.

Mr. Borah and other members of Congress who are opposed to the spy system contend that it operates to demoralize the federal prison system. They also object to the practice on the ground that it involves the federal courts. According to Mr Borah, the under-cover agents sen into federal prisons as spies are South Australia has probably the greeatest reticulation scheme in the world. The pipes are laid, but there is no water. It is claimed that conveying water from the Murray would that for the federal courts to be made a party to such a system is to lower their dignity and authority.

The Idaho Senator has taken the question directly to the Attorney General. He has outlined his objec-tions to practice in written communications and personal interviews. Mr. Borah declared that he was withholding making the Snook case a test until be ascertained whether there was anything else involved in the affair. He stated that he was opposed to the spring system and on that basis alone was protesting in behalf of Mr. Snook,

Printing and Rail Wages Increased

Pay Rises Given in February Greatest in Any Month Since October, 1928

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU NEW YORK-There was a larger mber of wage increases during February than in any month since October, 1928, according to "Facts for Workers," monthly economic news letter published by the Labor

Bureau. The advances were distributed chiefly among the printing trades and railroad employees, and wage reductions during the month were limited to the textile and clothing trades, the survey said. Twenty-nine separate printing unions received advances. Transportation workers on 28 separate railroads obtained advances, the gain going sometimes to a single craft, sometimes to all groups of employees.

In fact, both Mr. Hoover and his future Secretary of the Interior met the women who became their wives in the laboratory at Stanford. Herb Hoover was in the class of '95; Ray Wilbur in '96; Mrs. Hoover in '97, and Mrs. Wilbur in '98. In 1895 they were all in college together. It was just another one of those small groups who carry their college friendships all through life, though not one of this particular foursome could have guessed, back in those days—when war with Spain was just in the making and McKinley was President—that the young en-gineer and the young student of physiology would subsequently sit elde by side at the same long desk in the wing of the White House where the President and his Cabinet are accustomed to forgather twice a week. #### Installment Plan Extended to Taxes

Baltimore Neighborhood Banks Serve as Branch Agencies of City Collector

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO BALTIMORE, Md. — Payment of ity taxes through neighborhood anks, either in cash or on the installment plan, has proved successful here, it is reported at City Hall. A man of wide experience and wide travel, Mr. Wilbur is intensely inter-ested, among other things, in the course of development of American education. New developments—for example the proposed "House Sys-tem" at Harvard—engage his specu-lation and curiosity. It is the standthe plan was inaugurated.

During this time 12,518 persons paid taxes in neighborhood banks to the amount of $1,250,761.10.

The administration believes that in the course of a few years Baltimore will have a 100 per cent tax col-lection. During 1928, as a result of the new system of collection insti-tuted by the Commission on Efficlency and Economy, the 95 per cent mark was passed.

SPANISH PAPERS REVEAL STRONG REBEL FEELING

'Inserted to Comply With Law," Is Legend Under Propaganda

MADRID—The Spanish Government, while persistently maintaining its claim to general popularity, has recently, on the occasion of the outbreak at Ciudad Real and Valencia, confessed that no less than 90 per cent of the newspapers of the country showed hostility, veiled or otherwise. This was, it seems, revealed by the nonpublication of official notes and comments on the political situation by which the Government purported to inform the public of what was going on behind the scenes.

While lamenting the attitude of the press, the authorities have since insisted on receiving a certain measure of support to the extent of reserving stallment plan, has proved successful here, it is reported at City Hall.

The plan was the idea of Mayor William F. Broening, who, after referring it to a commission for study, signed an ordinance last July authorizing neighborhood banks as branch stations for the collection of taxes.

The answer to critics who declared that the installment plan would not be successful is seen in the statement of the city collector concerning the results from Feb. 11 to 28, when the plan was inaugurated. which this paper represents, has now come forward to break a lance on behalf of all the press in Spain, by maintaining that if the authorities insist on the insertion of their com-muniques, they should at least pay for them for them.

While El Debate does not deny the right of the Government to use the press, as in time of need they might use the railways, steamship com-panies, etc., for the services of the state, it asks that newspapers, being a private enterprise, should be treated on equal terms and their services paid for as they would be in the case of the companies re-ferred to. It is said that a precedent exists for this in the press laws of Finland.

Sponsor Points Out Pitfalls The managership is not in the hands of its proponents but of one of the political party organizations which operated before. Though partisan labels are gone from the ballot, Edmund P. Talbot, once Mayor as a Democrat, is Mayor under the election lately held, and is supported by three of the five councilmen. Edward F. Harrington, the city manager, is a former Democratic legislator.

deserves a fair trial, and says he sees some advantages in it. Arthur E. Seagrave, an attorney who launched the agitation for a change of government, charges that in remapping streets and grasping the new Mayor and council have not given a free hand in appointments to the city manager whom they chose, but have interfered with if not dominated these appointments. "Thus we still are getting political government in the sense that ap-pointees are chosen not on merit alone but also upon political con-siderations," Mr. Seagrave said. "But even with the plan in the hands of its enemies, I believe we are getting better government than before, because everybody is interested now and the councilmen are few enough in number so that everyone knows who to hold responsible. Business men and city officials As an example of interest, Howard showed utmost willingness and G. Fishack, director of the Taxpay agreeableness in carrying the reers' Association, cited a meeting of a planning as far as possible. Mr. committee of citizens called to confer with the Mayor about the budget Riley said, but some recommendations had to be abandoned because a dry task hardly any of them would of expense. Among these was the proposal for a civic center, to in-clude a new city-hall, a down-town ahead, nine men out of 11 who were ahead, nine men out of 11 who were park, and the new post office which the United States Government is preparing to build. cent of the city's taxes. Almost the same percentages probably mark the proportions between old American stock and citizenship of foreign extraction. Under political party ban-ners it was possible to enlist support overreaching racial and religious lines which otherwise crop out pronouncedly, he said.

"The city was better off under the old government of a large board of aldermen with very little power and a strong mayor," is his opinion.

"The opposition then was usually enough divided that those who pay most of the bills and have the largest stake in government could have at least some voice in the conduct of affairs. Perhaps the city manager plan is the thing for a city of homogeneous, well-educated population al having a constructive interest in civic affairs, but not for a coastal, cosmopolitan city like Fall River." Both sponsors and critics of the new system, however, look for a reduction this year in the city's record high tax rate. Heavy tax rebates which had to be made to mills last year will be much smaller. It is expected also that operating costs will be cut down, as Mayor Talbot has announced a policy of economy.

Mr. Harrington also pointed out in explanation of the present rate that the city's taxable valuation has fallen from $209,000,000 in 1923 to $158,000, 000 this year, mostly through reduc tions of textile mill assessments, and that the present tax roll is not a large one from which to gather revenue for the government of a community of nearly 125,000 people.

Abram Schönberger

A new star burst upon the musi cal horizon last night in Jordan Hall, in the person of Abram Schönberger, violinist. Edwin Bitteline supplied sympathetic accompaniments. This youth, still in his teens, opened a brilliant program with the little played Handel Sonata in D major, in which a pleasantly warm tone was displayed in contrast to the more austers quality demanded, in certain measures, by the composer. Mr. Schönberger proved that Handel was not entirely devoid of sentiment, as some would have us believe. The sonata was well received, and was followed by the difficult Wieniawski Concerto in F sharp minor. Many a violinist of riper years! than Mr. Schönberger has found more than his match in this composition. So far as this young man was concerned, technical difficulties did not exist, and better still, he not only found them surmountable but he also added breadth of interpretation and richness of tone. An admirable performance. "Air de Lensky." by Tchaikovsky-Auer, Hungarian Dance No. 1 by sky-Auer, Hungarian Dance No. 1 by Brahms and Traume by Wagner-Auer comprised the next group, in which the artist again revealed fine tone in combination with capable technic. And last on the program was set a few musical capers of Paganini, "La Campanella," arranged by Kochanski, and in nowise diminished in technical difficulty. Mr. Schönberger's performance was brilliant and was enthusiastically received. When this youth shall have fully correlated his variable compiler was shall as ous accomplishments we shall expect him to take his proper place among the violinists of today. A greater fusion of technic and emo-tion will go far toward making his performance still more enjoyable than that of last night, although his audience took great delight in his AUSTRIAN PRAISES

The letter is dated from Santo Domingo, Hispaniola Island, (Island of Haiti) Jan. 12, 1512 and was pen-

Columbus's secretary. At the end of the epistle, in a dashing scrawl—the Admiral's own penmanship—is a final sentence and the signature. The letter gives an interesting view of the relations between the Spaniards and Indians at that period and serves to emphasize the Impression held by historians that Diego Columbus held a very clearly defined sense of justice toward the aborigines of the Western Hemisphere. Referring to samples of gold which he is sending to the King, he writes: "All this means a great deal because it serves as a sign and proof that gold is to be found in all those rivers from which these samples were taken, and it is believed that in the future it will be discovered in large quantities, according to indications received from those places and rivers which have been recently searched."

The letter is valued at $125,000 and is the earliest of the three known personal letters in existence which personal letters in existence which bear Diego Columbus's signature, the other two being a letter to the Cardinal-Bishop of Tortosa, dated Santo Domingo, Dec. 13, 1520, and a letter to the King of Spain dated San Lucar, Nov. 5, 1523.

Among other items in the exhibition is a set of one dozen "fruit trenchers" which belonged to Queen Elizabeth, two Bibles of Napoleon I, his copy of Goethe's "Werther," which he discussed with the poet and suggested some changes in the conclusion; a volume of the "Scots Acts" from the library of James VI of Scotland, the first edition of Sir Francis Bacon's "De Augmentis Scientiarum," presented by the author to J. #### Land Distribution, Legal Code and Ban on Church Schools Among Plans

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO BELGRADE, Jugoslavia - Dr Urosh Krul, the Minister of Public Health, has just made public a program of reforms which the new Gov ernment is going to try to introduce. In the first place, more will be done for war invalids and for volunteers who fled from' Austria-Hungary to fight with the Serbian army on the Saloniki front, matia and the Voivodina.

"For 10 years this question has been under discussion, but for political reasons has never been settled, and thousands of acres of land, formerly belonging to large landholders, remained undistributed.

"The question of administration corruption is closely connected with that of the pay of officials. All here are agreed that there are too many officials in Jugoslavia, that many of them are not qualified for the positions which they hold, and that all are poorly paid. Yet for political reasons it has been very hard to reduce their number.

Into a World-Wide Movement

Is it not evident that the municipal idea is likely to develop into a world-wide movement? In the United States it originated as early as 1837 with the founding of the College of Charleston they cannot or will not answer they cannot or will not answer. then practically lay dormant until within the last 25 years, when it suddenly began—probably through the example of the University of Cincin--to develop surprising momentum. It is true that several municipal colleges opened between 1837 and 1900; such as the College of the City of New York in 1847, the University of Cincinnati in 1871 and the University of Toledo in 1884; but it was not until the beginning of the present sity of Toledo in 1884; but it was not until the beginning of the present century that the true function and the high importance of this new type of college dawned upon the municipal of college dawned upon the municipal

Only two institutions in the United States were originally founded as genuine municipal universities—the College of the City of New York and the University of Louisville; but others established on private endowments have been taken over by cities until all those just mentioned, besides the University of Akron, established in 1913, the College of the City of Detroit, 1924, the University of Wichita, 1926, and Hunter College, New York City, are bona fide municipal; while the following institutions, controlled and financed by the municipality be-cause of their city normal work, are recognized by the United States Bureau of Education as of college rank: Chicago Normal School, Harris Teachers' College, St. Louis, and Campbell College, Holton, Kan.

Co-operating With City

Evidently the idea has worth; for within the last five years a number of the larger universities of America have assumed a semimunicipal character that bids fair ultimately to transform them into municipally owned institutions. For instance, New York University lately inaugurated classes for municipal employees, held in the municipal buildings. Nearly 300 city workmen are enrolled in such immediately applicable courses as accounting, business English and the government of New York City.

Another effort in municipal co-op-eration is found in the highly valuable investigations in city affairs, now being conducted by graduate stu-dents, and in the graduate seminar held in the municipal building, where city records are always available. Again, in 1914, the university established the so-called Government House, an institution where students

Over the Bridge of Opportunity

YOUTH is marching to achievement throughout the world today. Never before have young men and women had better opportunity for growth and development than in these modern times, and never before has a greater emphasis been placed upon service as the goal of true success.

A series of 26 articles published in THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR will present an interesting survey of youth's activities in many lands and show the practical bearing of youth's viewpoint on world affairs and problems.

The Youth of Today

THIS series will inform you of the constructive and unifying influence of the youth movement in education, industry, prohibition, international and inter-racial relations, and other phases of human endeavor.

In this series Mr. Walter W. Van Kirk will share with Monitor readers his observations and experiences with reference to the Youth Movement which he has extensively studied on both sides of the Atlantic. Besides lecturing, and writing on this subject, he has conducted summer institutes of youth; is affiliated with various organizations associated with the Youth Movement, and has represented the Monitor at youth' conferences abroad. He speaks with authority.

A slight breeze is blowing from the west; I catch the glint here and there in the afternoon sun of the little rills and creeks coursing down the sides of the hills; the awakening sounds about the farm and the woods reach my ear; and every rustle or movement of the air or on the earth seems like a pulse of returning life in nature. I sympathize with that verdant Hibernian who liked sugarmaking so well that he thought he should follow it the whole year. I should at least be tempted to follow the season up the mountains, camping this week on one terrace, next week on one farther up, keeping just on the hem of Winter's garment, and just in advance of the swelling buds. until my smoke went up through the last growth of maple that surrounds the summit.—From "Winter Sunshine," by John Burroughs.

PRICES SURGE UPWARD IN A BUSY MARKET

Trading Is Unusually Heavy in Volume-Rediscount Rate Unchanged

NEW YORK (P)—A broad buying movement in today's stock market was temporarily checked by profittaking, but speculators for the advance quickly regained control of the price movement, and bid up a wide assortment of issues to new high records. Trading showed a further expansion in volume, blocks of 5000 to 35,000 shares appearing on the tape at frequent intervals throughout the day. Wall Street obviously was pleased that no change had been made in the rediscount rate, that brokers' loans had decreased and that the reserve position of the New York Bank, as well as for the system as a whole, had improved during the last week. There was still considerable uneasiness, however, over the credit situation.

Call money renewed at 7 per cent but was expected to go higher. Relative ease of call money this week has been due, in part, to the heavy accumulation of funds here in preparation for the $2,000,000,000 turnover of funds today.

Reports of unusually heavy income tax payments today were accepted as indications of the country's prosperity. One of the most important trade de-velopments of the day was the further increase in copper metal prices.

Another flock of 1928 earnings reports made their appearance, and most of them made favorable comparison with the year before.

with the year before.

Radio shares were again the features of the market. The old stock, which disappears from the list a week from today and has never paid a dividend, continued to make history by dend, continued to make history by soaring 19 points a share to a new high record at 520. The new stock advanced nearly 3 points to 103%.

Steel shares were heavily bought on buying influenced by reports that mills were operating practically at capacity, and by announcement of several new projects, including the construction of a triborough bridge in New York, which will require large quantities of Steel. Youngstown Sheet & Tube soared 7½ points to a new high at 119½, and United States Steel common moved up nearly 3 points to 190%.

Kennecott assumed the leadership of the copper shares by advancing nearly 4 points to a new high at 101%. Merchandising, mail order and chain store shares were heavily bought, Safeway Stores jumping 9 points, and

International Telephone fell back about 4 points on the traditional "selling on the good news" following the announcement of a 3-for-1 stock announcement of a 3-for-1 stock split up.

The oils divided attention with the Radio shares in the late afternoon when big purchasing orders were executed for Standard Oil and other issues. Radio new stock sold around 108, and the oid reached 533. Wright Aero climbed six points and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 10. The closing tone was strong. Total sales approximated 5,600,000 shares. sterling cables 1-16 of a cent higher at $4.85%.

Bonds today staged a rally in the New York market as favorable over-night news developments and Secre-tary of the Treasury Mellon's state-ment advising bond purchases brought in a supply of buying orders. Money was firm, and traders look for the situation to tighten with the com-pletion of the Government financing Realizing at midday cut down the gain. Anaconda Copper 7s again were actively bought on red metal price advances, and were shoved up more than 4 points in the early trad-ing.

Atchison convertible 4½s had a sharp rise, but Chesapeake & Ohio refunding 4½s, recently admitted to trading, fell back 4 points to a new low at 91. St. Paul adjustment 5s were strong. Pressed Steel Car 5s, which are now exchangeable into convertible bonds and common stock, extended their advance of yesterday more than a point.

WIDE VARIATION

Council and the American Society of Agricultural Engineers in their nation-wide agricultural study, the program for which has just been announced here. The question is: "Why does it cost one farmer 75 cents to produce a bushel of corn when the farm across the road produces it for 15 cents a bushel?"

New evidence of the extent to which this type of variation in farming costs forms one of the major aspects of the agricultural problem is contained in a preliminary study by Lawrence W. Wallace, executive secretary of the American Engineering Council and vice-chairman of the Hoover committee which recently

The average cost of producing cotton in Texas during one year was 21.4 cents a pound. During a farm contest it was produced for as little as 4.7 cents a pound. What Is the Way Out?

"Such records as the foregoing raise many questions," Mr. Wallace said. "The thoughtful man wants to know the 'why' of such variations. He asks: 'Why is one farmer able to accomplish mere than his neighbor? What are the contributing factors to such differences? Were all the farmers to show the results which the best ones do, would there still be a farm problem to vex the nation? Have some farmers found the way out, and it so, what is it?"

"A sufficient body of data has not been collected and analyzed to justify a conclusive answer to such quesa conclusive answer to such questions. The most that can be said is that they present a puzzling situa-

The growing use of mechanical equipment on farms is one of the important factors in this wide variation of costs, Mr. Wallace found. But he stressed the point that this is not, as has been often assumed, the enmanagement and the increase in Am Fo

New Device Ends Problem of Line Voltage Changes

VITAL and fundamental problem in the design of A. C. electric receivers, the automatic control of line voltage surges and variations which work havoc with tubes, has finally been solved, according to an announcement made this week by Dawson J. Burns of Ward Leonard. The answer to the question which has kept radio and electrical engineers steadily at work since the inception of the light socket radio set does not require the addition of any apparatus to A. C. radio circuits as they are today, nor does it involve in any way an external voltage regulating unit, such as is commonly used in the wall outlet or lamn socket.

device developed by Ward Leonard engineers after nearly three years of laboratory work is an in-stantaneously acting magnetic device, without moving parts, making unnecessary the present power transformer. In commercial form it is not appreciably larger than the usual power supply transformer which supplies voltages to tubes in the electric receiver. Although it need occupy no more space in the commercial receiver assembly than the conventional transformer, it performs the double function of transformer and automatic AC voltage regulator. The full specifications of the new unit, to be marketed under the name Ward Leonard AC Voltage Regulator, have not been released. It is understood, however, that neither resis-tors nor condensers nor thermal units of any kind are employed. The absence of these elements stamps it as a distinct departure in the field of voltage controls, where resist-ances, thermal units, and large cendensers have heretofore played a principal part.

The most immediate and, from the public's viewpoint, useful application of the device is in radio receivers where all components, such as tubes, may now be fully protected from the effects of excessive voltages. Other applications, while not so spectacular, are fully as import-

In the motion picture industry, the regulator answers the long-felt 9:00 want for a device to keep the film printing lamp filament at a constant temperature. Unequal lighting during printing has been a great problem and, now that talkies are with us, one which demanded a quick solution, if quality of reproduction were to arrive.

Films could be speeded up or slowed down in the old days before films talked, but no longer. Today, one man has as his sole function, keeping the film speed as nearly perfect as possible. The Regulator will make this much easier, as line voltage fluctuations will no longer affect motor speed.

Laboratories will find the device well-nigh indispensable. A constant voltage source has long been required in precision work.

The Central Stations will find the Regulator an excellent replacement for the small pole transformer now used on outlying transmission lines. Now the output of such trans-formers may be as high as 140 voits under light load, and as low as 85 volts under heavy load. The Regulator will make possible a more uniform voltage with consequent saving in current, lamps, and other accessories now used on the line.

Certain electric motor applications demand constant motor speed. The Regulator in modified form will be a precision motor starter and controller. The operators of printing presses will appreciate the importance of unvarying voltage in press

In A. C. train lighting systems, the Regulators will eliminate the an- 11:00 noying dimming of lamps while the train is starting, or the load varying.

WBZ Heard on West Coast

Since its assignment to a national cleared channel, WBZ and WBZA of Boston and Springfield are being heard in California, according to listeners at the Golden Gate. One man in Los Angeles heard the final program of the Winchester Arctic-Antarctic series from the New England 1000kc-300m. Westinghouse stations. He reported his reception of the program as being the best DX record he had scored among radiocasters in the United States. His letter follows, in part:

"Dear Sirs-I had one of the biggest and surprising thrills of my life last night when I picked up your pro-Company for the men in the arctic and antarctic regions.

"I picked up your program about 11:58 p. m., Pacific standard time. At that time you were reading a letter saying that 'everything was all right and not to worry.' All this came in very good with very little fading and with good volume.

"Last night was far from being a good DX night The night was warn with a very high wind (which is something unusual); also KGFH a local on 1000 k. c., was on the air, but no interference was noticed.
"WBZ is over 2500 air miles from

The Listener Speaks

NCIDENTS in the course of the composition of "Manon," by Jules Massenet, were presented in the weekly "Musical Episode," program heard at 10:30 p. m., eastern time, through Columbia on Thursday, As before in the series the manner of depicting these incidents was partly dramatic and partly descriptive while passages from the work in question were introduced appropriately. While the characterizations are usually rather sentimentalized and surrounded with an atmosphere sometimes more poetic than convincing, each episode does serve to give a comprehensive idea of the circumstances surrounding the composer chosen and of his reaction to them. In this Massenet presentation the first scene showed the meeting of the composer with his librettist Mialhac. This was succeeded by sketches of the monastery in which the original author of the story "Manon Lescaut," the Abbe Prevost—had lived and inwhich Massenet was now occupying the same room which had been used by him. Important scenes in the story were brought to life effectively.

In the program offered by the Columbians through the same stations, Ferde Grofe's suite "Three Shades of Blue" was the best part of the fare provided. Unfortunately this suite was kept in the final place so that there was only time for two movements, "Indigo," and "Alice omitted. "Indigo" was especially well played with a touch of the mood which animates Paul Whiteman's orchestra in the playing of the Andante from the "Rhapsody in Blue."

Another good number in the same program was the popular Russian gypsy song "Black Eyes," the melody of which also appears as the refrain of one number of "Music in May." The male quartet assisted the crchestra in Carmen Lombardo's "Sweethearts on Parade," and in 'When Summer Is Gone" and "The Song I Love."

Helen Oelheim was featured in the Sonora hour at 9:30 through Columbia. She sang in pleasant fashion the old favorite from "Mary," "Love Nest," and also "Auf Wiederschn" from Sigmund Romberg's "Blue Paradise." The Sonora trio and the Picadors Dance Orchestra provided the rest of the program. The latter included "Don't Hold Everything" as the opening number and a special arrangement of the familiar "Saint Louis Blues" which has also been prominently revived in "Blackbirds." Altogether it was a pleasing entertainment but one that left room for improvement in continuity of interest and other details considering its very wide distribution. The Seiberling Singers in the pre-ceding hour through WEAF and dis-

Who: HANNIBAL

Where: Africa, Spain and Italy. When: Third to second centuries

Why famous: A Carthaginian general, greatest of his race. His father took him into battle as a small child, and Hannibal was bred in the tradi-tion of hatred for that chief rival of Carthage, Rome. The descendants of the Phœnician colonizers of Carthage had been wont to regard the western Mediterranean as a "Phœnician lake"; but now had risen this new power, bent upon expansion.

Conflict was inevitable.
In 221 B. C. the army unanimously elected Hannibal commander-in-chief. He first attempted the subjugation of Spain; then he boldly set out to cross the Pyrenees and the Alps with his army and his war elephants. This famous passage of the Alps by the Carthaginian army was accomplished in 15 days, despite storms and attacks from the mountain

At first Hannibal defeated the Romans in three battles in northern Italy. Then the Romans evaded the enemy, playing for time in which to raise a still greater army. Yet when the battle of Cannæ was fought in the summer of 216 B.C., Hannibal almost annihilated the Roman forces. Following his triumph he made what is onsidered his most serious blunder: he did not march directly upon that her children must beware of the Rome. Probably he delayed in order to rally the other peoples of Italy to his support, in which he was partially successful. Then, upon the overwhelming defeat of his brother Hasdrubal at the hands of the Romans, Hannibal realized that he fought a lost cause. He had maintained his forces in Italy for 15 years, but then was called to Car-thage to defend that city against Scipio Africanus. At the battle of Zama, Hannibal met his first and

Hannibal seems to have been a man of nobility and fortitude. He entered with his men into every hardship, and could do with remarkably little food and sleep. Historians are fond of referring to him as the nost magnificent failure in history

Prohibition and Law Enforcement

THE extreme deliberation with which President Hoover is proceeding in the selection of his commission to inquire into the administration of the law in the United States is merely commensurate with the importance of the undertaking. The few names that have thus far been mentioned as those of individuals likely to be appointed would seem to indicate on his part a purpose of gathering together a commission of such intellectual attainments, legal achievements and personal reputation that its recommendations will be accepted by the public as authoritative. Indeed, he is reported to have said that it was his purpose to organize a commission of such dignity and standing as to compel Congress to accept its conclusions.

It is perfectly apparent that such an investigation as the President has in mind will require prolonged inquiry, especially as few of the men likely to serve upon it can be expected to give all their time to its activities. Furthermore, any legislation based upon the report is scarcely likely to become effective within two or three

It may be claimed by those who are agitating some form of a change in the prohibition law that these necessary delays will result only in shelving their favorite issue. But it is quite apparent that the President, in providing for this inquiry, has not had the measure of observance of the prohibition law alone in thought. Indeed, that may not have been the primary reason for his undertaking this investigation. He has very justifiably pointed out that even before the existence of the prohibition amendment, law enforcement in the United States notoriously lagged far behind that in other civilized countries. It is further a matter of notoriety that today crimes and misdemeanors, wholly without any connection with prohibition, do not meet in the United States with that swift and certain punishment which attends them in England, Germany, or France. In brief, important as the question of intoxicating liquors may be, the matter of law enforcement, of the observance of all laws, is paramount. If a greater measure of obedience to all law, or a more rigorous method of its enforcement, can be encouraged or devised, the prohibition issue will be measurably solved.

In the meantime, there is nothing about this investigation that suggests in any way evading or dodging that issue. The prohibition law is on the statute books, and its enforcement is a duty alike of the national and state governments. So far as the National Government is concerned, it is already apparent that the President proposes to make every possible endeavor to secure enforcement. Those endeavors will proceed at the same time that the inquiry of the commission on the administration of the law is prosecuting its inquiry. Neither one excludes the other. And there is no reason to apprehend that there will be delay or procrastination in the effort to put the enforcement service on a more efficient basis while the investigating commis-

Taxing the Australian Public

THERE seems to be little doubt that the economic system of Australia, as practiced in recent years, has been instrumental in making it more difficult to carry on the export trade of the Commonwealth. It has built barriers against imports, and produced locally at higher costs. By so doing it has increased the cost of production of Australian exports, and so reduced profits. This has inevitably reduced the extension of business by causing smaller producers to go to the wall. Those trades which have derived benefit by the system have done so at the expense of lesser and feebler competitors. The later tendencies of trade to establish a protected market at home by which they can maintain a dependable business by squeezing out the foreigner, and at the same time get rid of their surplus abroad, have resulted in the system of bounties and bonuses by which the Australian consumer is made to pay the difference between ruling prices at home and world parity. Butter and sugar are two examples. In the former case a bounty of 41/2d. per pound is paid from a levy of 11/2d. per pound on all butter produced. This, it is estimated, will result in a gain for the year of almost £3,000,000. Such gain can only come out of the pockets of the Australian consumer, and really represents a tax on the whole public. This in turn causes a rise in the cost of living, out of which follows the compensating rise in wages. The entire cost is thus laid on the community, which has, as a whole, no means of passing on the burden.

In the case of sugar one-third of the Australian output is exported at the low price of world parity, necessarily causing a home sale at a figure that will make good the deficit brought about by the export prices. The position thus is that sugar grown in Australia is sold to the world at £12.2.6 per ton, while the price to the local consumer is £26.10-probably the most expensive sugar supply in the world. By this means the Colonial Sugar Refining Company last year was able to declare a dividend of 20 shillings per share and a bonus of 5 shillings.

These are some of the aspects of Australian industry largely contributing to the unsatisfactory condition prevailing in trade. Such a system can result only in giving profits to certain sections of industry at the final expense of industry as a whole and the consumer generally. So long as it persists wages cannot fall, and production costs, even if they do not rise, must remain stationary. At present such costs are so high that not only are secondary industries imperiled, but primary industries also are threatened, while wages have a constant tendency to mount to meet the continuous increase in general costs. In this respect the British Economic Mission sounded a warning note which it will be well for Australia to observe.

An International Bank Project

ROM the beginning the meeting of experts on reparations in Paris has been dominated by the idea of establishing an international bank, and although wide publicity has been given to the idea only within the last week, the importance of this aspect of the matter is clearly realized in political, financial and economic circles the world over. The best that can be done now is to make immediate arrangements for the flotation of only a small proportion of bonds, and the present meeting will not complete its work unless it can leave behind it a board of trustees with power to act on favorable occasions and possessing the necessary technical qualifications for manipulating its holdings on behalf of the owners.

This was the starting point of the project. Logically if their efforts succeed the board can render services which existing banks can scarcely perform. Primarily the central organization on which the chief world banking interests would be represented would have the duty of holding German bonds, of watching the money markets and of floating these bonds into private circulation. thus commercializing the reparations debt and taking it from the political to the financial sphere. There are still differences of opinion regarding the precise functions of the bank, but some such institution which will peculiarly apply itself to the problems of international indebtedness and provide machinery for financial settlements of an international character appears to be an imperative need. It would not enter into rivalry with the national banks of issue, but it would co-operate with them to coordinate commercialization of the debt. It should be permanent, it should enjoy initiative, it should have solid assets which can only be determined when debtor and creditor countries are in willing agreement on the amount and the modalities of the debt. For, strictly speaking, Germany owes nothing to the Allies in the commercial sense in which the Allies owe to the United States. That Germany should make substantial compensation is acknowledged, but the extent of such compensation is somewhat arbitrary, depending not upon specific transactions but upon elusive estimates, adjudged demands and a largely uncontrollable capacity whose determination involves empirical economic factors. Before the bank can be built, therefore, a foursquare solution of the reparations problem which will stand the test of time and be acceptable to all sides must be found.

But outside the narrow reparations problem lies considerable scope of usefulness for an international bank. It could make adjustments in internal and external debts. It could act as an intermediary between present banking institutions. It could, by judicious loans, encourage production and exchange of goods among nations. It could bring order into the chaos of haphazard business conditions, and indirectly should do something to break down the multiple barriers of tariff-ridden Europe. First, the post-war liquidation was treated politically. Secondly, post-war liquidation was treated financially. At last it is realized that it must also be treated economically, and unquestionably an international bank should have a beneficial influence. It should be a veritable financial and economic league of nations, and by promoting contacts and facilitating relations be an additional bulwark of peace.

The objections which are raised are chiefly based on prejudice against progress. There is a lacuna between national banks which requires filling, but when it is proposed to fill it with persons who are able to understand the modern interlocking and solidarity of interests the opponents protest against what they describe as supernational authority. They forget that the plan in its essence adumbrates the wholehearted collaboration of the banks of emission and other powerful banking companies. Since the shareholders and controllers would belong to the principal countries working with, guided by and guiding their governments, it would be impossible for any particular country to misuse the bank in its individual interest. It would have a broader, more general cutlook, and a genuine common purpose. It would be a universal auxiliary of existing institutions, taking cognizance of world needs, applying itself to the reduction of international indebtedness, supplying unique machinery the lack of which has been responsible for many difficulties in the post-war period. If it were established, with carefully considered statutes, it would be destined to become one of the most practical expressions of the vital interdependence of the

Traffic on the Panama Canal

THERE are few institutions, owned either privately or by the Government, which show so steady an increase in business and so consistent a trend toward higher records as does the Panama Canal. It is a poor month in which some record is not broken and it often occurs that within one or two months all previous marks for tonnage, tolls and transits are advanced.

January, 1929, was such a month and the ultimate capacity of the canal became a more pressing question. Recognizing this fact, the United States Senate recently appropriated $150,000 for a preliminary survey of the Nicaragua canal route, with a view to having facts and figures available when the time shall come to duplicate the facilities at Panama with a similar cut a few hundred miles to the north, through Nicaragua.

That such a canal eventually will be needed appears reasonably certain, for even though the Panama Canal were operated permanently on a twenty-four-hour basis and equipped with triplicate locks, it could not handle indefinitely the fast growing tonnage presenting itself daily for transit through its waters.

The most recent records, those for the past January, show that 603 commercial ships passed through the cut, on which tolls of $2,-503,000 were collected. In these vessels were carried 2,859,000 tons of cargo. From these figures, it may readily be estimated that the canal is now earning approximately $30,000,-000 annually and that cargo tonnage for the year will surpass the 30,000,000-ton mark.

The Government is earning a substantial profit on the Panama Canal. Should an auxiliary one at Nicaragua be needed its construction costs could be met in considerable part from the profits earned at Panama.

Such Is the Prince of Wales

THE Prince of Wales's recent action in selling a number of his horses so as not to allow the riding of them-previously his chief amusement-to interfere with the carrying out of his duties in representing the King, is now paralleled by another incident which alsoendears him to the people of Britain. It was on the day he presided over the first Royal levee of the year at St. James's Palace, Pall Mall, London. Elaborate ceremonial had been arranged. He was to drive in a silver and gilt coach from Buckingham Palace, the King's London residence, to St. James's attended by a squadron of the Horse Guards in full parade equipment, including highly polished steel cuirasses and enormous busbies.

The weather turned intensely cold, and the discomfort this parade would have occasionednot to himself, for he would have been well sheltered in the coach, but to the troops that were to take part—at once appealed to the Prince. Half an hour before the ceremony was to begin. therefore, he quietly countermanded it, and walked instead to St. James's Palace, from the modest bachelor quarters he occupies in York House near by. Little was said about this at the time, but a few of the 47,000,000 inhabitants of some gray little islands in the Northern Seas took note of it and approved.

Our Proneness to Caricature

POLDING back his newspaper crisply at the comment by Mr. St. John Ervine, the London critic temporarily of the New York World, a man shuts off the radio and extends his feet toward the blaze. Then probably he reads something as provocative as this: "The people of the theater are dearly devoted to conventions, and even when they become liberalminded and attack an abuse they behave as if the abuse were still in existence long after they have abolished it."

It seems that Mr. Ervine has heard, if unofficially, that there exists in London a school for the training of stage butlers about to embark upon American tours-butlers who invariably pronounce "am" as if it were "ham" and "unable" as if it were "hunhable." He has noticed, too, that Americans in English plays hear such names as Cyrus Q. Pumpelnickel, dress in a style never seen off the musical comedy stage, and chew gum incessantly. And the striking thing is that these caricatures persist though disproved a thousand times over. No matter. As conventions they are indispensable. An Englishman upon the New York stage without his monocle and his "Bah Jove"? The thing is simply not done.

Admittedly, Mr. Ervine knows his theater. Even a casual reconnoiter among theatrical memories convinces us of the truth of his contention. The theater, with all its professions of emancipation from the old traditions, is still in some respects amazingly unprogressive. But there is worse than this. For does not the identical habit prevail off the stage? Do we not cling to certain cherished caricatures of our neighbors long after they should have been relegated to the dust heap?

It is a pernicious habit—that of keeping people packed in neat little compartments where we fancy they dwell. We do it with all sorts of people, near at hand and far away. Even though these people do not tally with our preconceived notions about them, we still measure them according to our formula. In this case at least, seeing is not believing. Hence an Englishman will say to an American, or an American to an Englishman: "At home you say or wear or do such and such a thing," whereupon it is very little use for the person accused to protest that he does nothing of the sort. Mr. Ervine has pointed out an important reform to be undertaken by the theater. Yes, and also by all the world outside.

Editorial Notes

In the course of his remarks at the dinner given him by the Sportsmanship Brotherhood, Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at University of Michigan, said: "Close to 1500 boys are engaged in competitive sports at Michigan and I like to emphasize the fact that there has not been one case of discipline before the athletic board for eight years." What better tribute could be paid to the high standard of college athletics at the present time?

Our Art School

ernments for their public galleries, had come to settle down in the neighborhood. The head of the local co-educational school being a resourceful woman immediately decided to open an art school, and much to everyone's surprise, the great professor actually fell in with her views to the extent of consenting to visit the school once a week to correct the painting class.

The opening day for the new venture had come, all the students who felt the call of Art had assembled in the new wing henceforth to be dedicated to that purpose. The head decreed that Miss April, who was "so artistic," should be in charge of the room.

Miss April was really the dancing mistress, as you would readily have guessed had you seen the charming attitudes she fell into when climbing steep, slippery banks to procure from the hedges the branches of leaves and sprays of berries she now skillfully arranged as a "still

With pink cheeks and shining eyes she gazed at the handiwork, head tilted to the left; walking backward some paces, she gazed again, head tilted to the right; the subject she had chosen was a great bunch of autumn leaves, long sprays of oak turning to a vivid red, beech changing to golden brown, feathery sprays of "old man's some scarlet hips and haws and trailing branches of brambles loaded with ripe blackberries. These branches she had arranged in a gray vase of Ruskin pottery—tinted like a dove's breast—and the vase she had cleverly placed on a polished black table which reflected the myriad colors of the leaves. With a final happy inspiration Miss April pulled from her own shoulders her many-shaded orange scarf (hand woven), laying it beside the vase half on and half suspended from the table.

"Notice, young ladies," said MIss April, "how this scarf picks up every color of the foliage and pulls the whole scheme together. We will call our first composition 'An Autumn Symphony.' I will now leave you to your work.'

Precisely at twelve o'clock, Miss April reappeared, a large, a very large professor accompanying her. Instantly Miss April sensed that all was not going quite as well as she had expected. The class seemed in an uneasy frame of thought instead of burning with the enthusiasm of art. As she entered she overheard the one male student remark that painting was a mug's game, anyway. The most promising girl student was complaining that her brushes were too soft, another's on the other hand were too hard while a third declared that her canvas had too fine a "Good morning, everybody," said the professor. With a quick glance the successful painter of "The Engine Room" and "Pig Iron" took in his new group of students, their shining curls, rose-leaf complexions, their gay, new overalls; took in also the expensive japanned paint boxes, gleaming palette knives and formidable array of hog's hair and sable brushes. Took in, alas! the wholly ineffectual attempts sketched out on rows of fair white canvases.

"This being our first morning, young ladies, I shall not attempt to correct any work. I will instead give you a short talk on this great subject of art which it seems you have elected to make your vocation. The very large professor stood facing the class; with his piercing blue eyes he gazed somewhat fiercely on his charming new students. "As I entered this room, I think I overheard a student attribute the failure of their morning's work to the fact that those expensive and very numerous brushes I see were too soft to perform their office." At these words, a young person in a puce overall decorated with polka dots loosened a handful of brushes which fell with a clatter onto the floor. "Let me tell you the history of young John Chrome who lived in the eighteenth century. As a lad he also had an overpowering desire to become an artist, but found himself in the unfortunate position of being without the means to purchase either canvas or brushes. His ingenuity nevertheless overcame his limitations and when he was not painting the outside of stagecoaches—which

IT WAS a great day in our little town. Professor Blunt, head of a big academy of art and painter of those unusual pictures, "The Engine Room" and "Pig Iron," lately purchased by the French and English Govmother's discarded aprons, when too worn or torn to be of further use to her.

"History does not relate whether he found these brushes too soft, young ladies, but history does relate that he became famous and founded a school of landscape painting. I recommend that you visit our public galleries and study the paintings of this artist, Chrome, always remembering something of the difficulties that he overcame. The young lady who complained that her brushes were too thick may be interested to hear another story.

"When the great Albert Dürer visited Venice in the fifteenth century, his reputation having preceded him, the young portrait painter, Giorgioni, invited him to his studio and begged that he would share with him the secret of the special brush he supposed Dürer must possess, a brush made of some unknown composition which sess, a brush made of some unknown composition w enabled him to reproduce in such marvelous minuteness the golden strands of hair in some portrait, or each hair of the fur that decorated the collar of some noble's velvet coat. For answer, the German artist took one of the broadest brushes from Giorgioni's palette, dipped it in paint and with a few strokes produced on canvas a silken curl of hair of the exquisite fineness of a spider's web, showing that the virtue was in the hand and eye, not in the tool or canvas.

"You, young sir, our only male student I regret to see, I think I heard say that painting was a mug's game. If you have not yet completed your classical studies, I would recommend to your attention the value that the Romans placed on art. This great people were very far from considering painting to be a mug's game, and on one occasion a painter saved a city when the soldiers, whose business it was to do so, had failed. When Demetrius attacked the city of Rhodes, he learned the great artist Protogenes was painting a picture within the walls of the city. If you read Pliny you will learn that this fact alone hindered King Demetrius from taking Rhodes out of fear that the picture might be destroyed. You may read in this contemporary diary that 'he was pleased rather to spare the picture than to take the victory, which was already in his hands."

Abruptly the professor stepped from the platform. "The painting class is dismissed for a week."

"But, professor," said the "so artistic" Miss April, "my autumn symphony will have faded before next Monday. "Remove that object," thundered the professor, waving a contemptuous hand in the direction of the shiny black table with its gorgeous burden. "Whoever perpetrated that outrage should know the proper place for it is in a horticultural hall or the window of a ladies' shop. As for you, young woman, I advise you to take a lesson from a more ancient civilization than ours. Why, a Chinaman will steal out of his house at dawn in order to pick one blossom drenched in dew. He will place this blossom in a vase and watch it through all the hours of the day before he even attempts reverently to reproduce on canvas its intricate outline and subtle coloring. And you dare to bewilder these helpless young innocents with that!"

Here the professor brought his fist down on the little table with so much violence that Miss April's orange scarf (hand woven) uncoiled itself and slid onto the floor. With unexpected gallantry he lifted it and tenderly placed it round Miss April's shoulders.

"But, sir, what subject should we have for the next

"Give them a round crusty loaf, a pewter plate and a white table cloth, and mind the crease is left in. Such a subject will provide all the form, color and tone they need. It inspired Velásquez to paint a masterpiece, it should give ample scope to this class," and the professor strode from the room.

"I think he's just sweet," said the girl in the puce overall with polka dot, retrieving her brushes which lay like spillikins on the floor.

"I'm longing for next Monday," said Miss April breath-

From the World's Great Capitals—Berlin

A T RAMSIN, a small town in Mecklenburg, where the A housing conditions are very bad, a war memorial has just been erected which is unique of its kind. It is a building containing dwellings for a large number of families, and a memorial plate upon the façade has the following inscription:

To Remind the Living
Of the Terrible War Sufferings,
To Admonish Those of the Future To Peaceful Aspiration
This Parish Built These Dwellings
To Mitigate Distress, And Dedicated Them to the Memory of Their Fallen Citizens

As Mecklenburg is generally considered politically a reac tionary country, this generous memorial stands out all the more conspicuously from the many costly monuments that have no ethical or practical worth.

Two entirely new seminaries, the practical value of which time alone will be able to prove, are shortly to be organized in Berlin. The first is an "Educational Course for Wireless Speakers," to be held in the State Hochschule für Musik. The course, which costs fifteen marks, will last ten weeks and comprises one lesson each week of two hours duration. It is organized by the wireless experimental section of the Hochschule and is under the management of Herr Graef, teacher of voice production in the section of that institution for church and school music. He will be assisted by Dr. Wuerzburger, manager of the "German Wave" station, and every possible technical help will be rendered by the wireless experimental department, the chief feature being the employment of the Stille wire—so called after its inventor—which enables the speaker before the microphone to hear the returning sound of his own

The second educative innovation is a "film seminary, in which competent school teachers will be thoroughly trained in the art of selecting and arranging suitable pictures for their classes and also in the management of the projecting apparatus. A wide scope for school instruction by the medium of the screen, which will to a great extent take the place of books, will, it is said, be authorized by the German educational authorities within measurable

In consideration of the growth of aviation and the expectation of still further advance in air traffic in the near future, it has been decided to extend the Berlin Airdrome. Work is to be taken up as soon as the weather permits and carried rapidly forward; when the contem-plated 80,000 square meters have been added to the ground the airdrome will be one of the largest in the world. The rolling track is to be enlarged so that it will cover 40,000 square meters and extend across the whole flying ground A commodious shed is to be built for the special of sport and advertising airplanes. Commensurate with the further development of night flying, the entire lighting system is to be reinforced. Big chimney stacks in the neighborhood of the airdrome are to be provided with neon pipes which will enable incoming pilots to see the airport distinctly at a great distance.

Germany—Berlin in particular—always enjoys forming fresh societies, and the number of "Vereine" is legion. A new one has recently been organized—"Studiengesellschaft für Strassenschilder und Hausnummern Beleuchtung" (Society for Promoting the Illumination of Street Names and House Numbers). It has long been a source of annoyance to Berlin people and visitors to this city, to say nothing of the taxi drivers, that very few house numbers can be recognized after dark. The society, which comprises some prominent business men and electricians, has a comprehensive project for the requisite illumination in all cities throughout Germany, the carrying out of which will, however, occupy some years and in Berlin alone will cost approximately 20,000,000 marks. The landlords of the tenement houses will have to contribute a small monthly sum toward the expense, and after the lapse of some years the electric apparatus would become their property or the property of the city. It is believed the Berlin Electricity Works would supply the current for this purpose at a low rate, while an advantage would be that the project would in Berlin provide employment to some 3000 workmen for a period of at least two years.

Numerical details as to the financial standing of this city have recently been published. While it is frankly admitted that Berlin is the richest city in Germany and the second richest-London being first-in Europe, it is added that this is only relative. Expressed in percentage, Frankfurt and Hamburg, in proportion to size and number of inhabitants, are wealthier than Berlin and among the German capital's 4,500,000 inhabitants 3,250,000 have no fortune of their own.-Berlin's entire capital amounts to 12,500,000,000 marks, which is naturally very unequally divided up. There are, for instance, 525 millionaires (in marks); 960 persons whose capital ranges from 500,000 to 1,000,000 marks; 11,700 people who own 100,000 to 500,000 marks; 14,000 persons with a capital of 50,000 to 100,000 marks and 50,0000 persons whose capital amounts to 10,000 up to 50,000 marks.

It would seem that the greater the stress of the times, the keener grow the inventive powers of the Germansalways a nation of inventors. In the year 1924 the number of patents registered at the Reichs Patent Office in Berlin was 56,831, which increased in 1928 to more than 75,000. It is deemed necessary in consequence of this influx of registrations to augment the number of employees in the Reichs Patent Office.
